Description

Perforated lattice polycarbonate floor lamp by Patricia Urquiola. A French translation for the humble armadillo, the Tatou Floor Lamp takes inspiration from the protective leather shell of this captivating creature. Further inspired by the resilience of traditional Japanese samurai armour, Tatou is sculpted from a blend of methacrylate and polycarbonate to form a lattice like protective dome shell. Designed by Spanish architect and designer Patricia Urquiola, exclusively for Flos, this contemporary floor lamp journeys diffused light from an uplighter diffuser to create a meditative illumination. Cleverly designed the lattice ensures a welcoming and glare-free illumination as light and shadow dance through each of the individual sections. The look is completed by a durable steel lamp shade elevating the dome and diffuser in style. Requires: 1 x 205W E27 4200lm Incandescent halogen bulb (included) Weight: 16.40kg Approx.
